

MRS. HAMILTON YANCEY, OF ROME.

Miss Theodosia Burr. A number of Atlanta friends of the bridal pair will attend the wedding, leaving on the afternoon trains, reaching Griffin in time for the ceremony, and returning at 1 o'clock that night.

The bride and groom leave after the reception for a wedding tour north. They both have many friends who are wishing for them every happiness.

MRS. HAMILTON YANCEY.

Mrs. Hamilton Yancey, of Rome, whose counterfeit resemblance adorns this page today, is one of the most charming of women. She is more than that, too, in that she not only shines at the dinner party which is made to sparkle by her wit, but she shines also at Cloverdale, the country home of herself and honored husband, where absorbed in the science of a dairy farm, she manages to a nicety men, and cows and pounds and pounds of butter. This, with the seven children who rise up and call her blessed, keeps her a busy woman. Besides her wit and her charm. Mrs. Yancey is generous and whole-souled, possessing true kindness of heart—a phrase which is often used lightly, but which means a vast deal.
